

Torch

2024

Not Local...

But NJCL

(Nationals)

NJCL (National Junior Classical League) is a bit like SCJCL (South Carolina Junior Classical League), however NJCL includes all of the JCL's. Simply, NJCL is a massive latin nerd convention camp. For most who attend this, it's a time for them to talk to people from all over the country and connect through and learn latin. There are also national offices, like ours. If you are interested --- its too late --- for this year. Convention is over the summer and this year's has already happened, but next year's hasn't. SIGN UP!!!

Photos

Busride to convention.

"He has bad eyesight"

Girl's secret pizza party

Those who know --- know.

Photos Pt. 2

A toga group photo.

Selling goods at Agora.

Sponsors DOMINATING at world seiries certamen.

From the reps

Each of the junior reps were asked to write a short article for the torch. For those who don't know the junior representatives or junior reps, are middleshoolers who are intrested in the the SCJCL offices. Theese articles were written by Mia Bradley and Jake Sheehey.

Jake

Sheehey

Jake decided to write about his preference in office:

One of the positions I would like to be for the South Carolina Junior Classical League Board is the Editor. The editor takes high writing skills and a way to make a paper with just simple words on them look really good. I feel like I can meet those qualifications very well, and have a really fun time while doing them all. I love to write long pages, and a long page about Latin is no exception. Latin has always been the language I would love to speak and be able to write about the marvelous wonders of this language and the great community we have making the language way much more fun to learn about. This language and the community is always a place I could turn towards, and I would love to serve it back at my very best.

Mia

Bradley

Julius Cheeser: Taxidermied Rat.

Mia wrote about her favorite NJCL activity:

This year I went to my first national convention. It was an amazing experience, personally my favorite thing were the colloquias, which are 45 minutes lectures on different topics each one was different and interesting. I went to as many of them I could, from Julius cheeser to classical myths and histories in films. They were so informative and I learned so many new things. Definitely the highlight of my week.

Dates/info

Fall forum- March 15, 2025

Dreher, High School

-Learn about cool classical civilization things!!!

NJCL- July 21-26, 2025

Miami University, Oxford, Ohio

NJCL website: <https://southcarolinajcl.org/>

Hi im the editor, Noll. This is my last year in SCJCL and my last Torch. By the way Nationals are really fun and you really should go. Also, go to spring and fall forum... if you like latin.

Thank you, Noll